The year 1891 opens more auspiciously for Nevada than any previous year during the past decade.

The next ten years will see more activity in mining and agriculture than the last, and when those of the APPEAL readers who live to write the figures 2000 on their letters, they will see the State redeemed and prosperous.

THE TRUE REASON.

Whenever a Nevada editor casts his lines in another State, he always has a good word to say of Nevada.

The evening News, published in Sacramento by Wells Drury says: Some inspired idiot, who draws sustenance from the Smithsonian Institution for dreaming and romancing, has been filling the ears of Washington City reporters with theories regarding the decrease of population in our neighboring State of Nevada. This Smithsonianite, who says he is afraid to disclose his name lest he should put himself in jeopardy of lynching if ever caught in the sagebrush State, says that Nevada's population has dwindled to its present meagre stage because the agricultural possibilities of that region are on the decline. Greater ignorance of facts could not well be imagined. Every year sees additions to the acreage devoted to agriculture, horticulture and inclosed grazing lands in Nevada. Irrigation, which is destined to revolutionize and fructify the great so-called arid region between the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevada range, is beginning to be understood and appreciated. Utah has already shown what can be accomplished in this way, and Nevada is on the same road to prosperity. One serious drawback to Nevada has been the method adopted for the sale of public lands, and this evil has also been felt in California. Speculators have been permitted to gobble up all the springs and running water in large districts of country, and and by a systematic mode of procedure, the establishment of settlers has been discouraged in a manner that amounted to prohibition. This has been done for the purpose of securing broad ranges for broad-horned cattle. When Nevada concludes that it pays better to have her rich valleys inhabited by families instead of droves of cattle, the era of prosperity will return, and the State will no longer point with pride to the fact that it is a cow pasture for its neighbors.

Senator Hearst's condition has alarmed his friends. Since he has returned to Washington he has been confined to his bed and the greatest fears are entertained of his recovery. His son was summoned from San Francisco Christmas eve, and he is now on his way to the national capital. Monday night Senator Hearst passed restlessly, and there is no improvement since in his condition. He is attended by his wife.

The Austrian mother-of-pearl-workers are riotous on account of hard times caused by our new Tariff. This is merely turning the tables. Some years ago there was a flourishing mother-of-pearl industry in New Jersey, which was killed by reducing the Tariff. Under the McKinley bill it is reviving to the detriment of Austrian workmen and the benefit of our own.

The Stockton Mail prints the following rumor: Rumors come fast and thick from New York that all is not well in Herman Oelrich's household. He is reported to be engrossed in business and she is finding that she has plenty of time to be dull and feel neglected. These big society weddings frequently turn out that way.

The national banks appear to be trying to curry favor with the Farmer's Alliance by having a bill allowing them to loan money on notes secured by mortgages on real estate, introduced in Congress.
